

Ordinary days,
nothing special.
なんてことない日常。

Day after day, we live these busy, and quietly cherished moments.
忙しくも愛おしい毎日を今日も生きている。

And yet, somehow, we notice a sense of emptiness within ourselves.
なのになぜか、満たされない自分に気付く。

If we stop moving forward, it feels as though the world will leave us behind.
歩みを止めてしまえば、世界に置いてけぼりにされそうなの。

So we swallow our unease, and escape back into our usual, everyday life.

そんな不安を飲み潰すように、いつも通りの日常に逃げ帰るのだ。

That's fine.
それでいい。

That's how it should be.
それがいい。

But... is it really fine?
本当にそれでいい？

Vision

They say most of what we know comes through our eyes. In a world where both the beautiful and the unwanted stream endlessly, can we ever truly see what we long to see?

私たちが得る情報の大部分は目から入ってくるらしい。見たいものも見たくないものも、絶えず流れ込むこの世の中で、私たちは本当に見たいものを見落とさずにいられるだろうか。

I like carrying a camera with me. When I walk around town with the intention of taking photos, I find it easier to notice lovely things I would normally overlook. I'm not very good at make-up or styling my hair, so I don't like it much, but on days when my lip makeup turns out well, I can't help wanting to look in the mirror. Sometimes, when I see a sky that's unbelievably blue, I think something silly like, "What if one day that sky splits open and a giant hand reaches down? Maybe that's when we'd realize we weren't really human, but toys being used by some higher-dimensional beings." The sky is very beautiful. Every passing car seems to have its own unique expression. Recently, I saw a car with an especially cute face, but I don't know its name. I love holding leaves up to the light and looking through them.

I like the voice of someone important to me when I hear it with a still-drowsy mind just after waking up. The sound of my mother making breakfast in the morning now feels nostalgic to me. Songs that didn't resonate with me back then sometimes pierce my heart now with just a single line of their lyrics. Music, at times, stays closer to the heart than words ever can. If the day ever comes when I have a wedding, I will choose a few carefully selected songs that symbolize my life. And quietly, I'll hope that the people dear to me will notice.

Hearing

Noise or silence—everyone has their taste. Yet one desire unites us all: immersion. To reclaim the outlines lost in the world, or to escape the weight of their contours?

喧騒か静寂か。人の好みはさまざまだが、共通していることがある。それは、私たちが「没入」を求めているということだ。世界に溶け出した輪郭を取り戻すためか、その輪郭の責任から逃れるためか。

Without aroma, there is no flavor. The bitter chocolate, the black coffee—once feared as poison—now flow through adulthood like life-lines. It is this fragile nonchalance that sometimes gift us happiness.

香りがなければ味は楽しめない。苦いチョコレートやコーヒーなど、かつては毒だと避けていたものが大人になった今のライフラインになっていたりする。そんないい加減さが幸せをもたらしたりもする。

Taste

A scent can awaken memory. Brushing gently past the amygdala and the hippocampus, it reaches us, quietly collecting traces of the life you've lived.

香りは記憶を呼び起こす。扁桃体と海馬をそれぞれ撫でて香りは私たちにたどりつく。ひとしれず、あなたが生きた証を集めている。

Smell

When the mind exaggerates, we grow skilled at pretending to feel. We act as if we savor the present, yet cannot tear our gaze from the promises of tomorrow. Are you truly feeling, here and now?

Touch

下手に脳が肥大したせいで、私たちは感じているふりが上手くなる。今を楽しむふりをして、未来の期待から目を逸らせていない。
あなたは今、感じているだろうか？

I usually have trouble falling asleep, but on days when I've swum a lot, I sleep like a stone. That feeling of my whole body sinking into the bed can't possibly be a lie. I don't like strength training, but after working up a sweat, I can't help loving the coolness of the floor against my back when I lie down. I wonder how many people share the small pleasure of running their tongue over their teeth after brushing them.

YESTERDAY IS HISTORY, TOMORROW IS A MYSTERY, BUT TODAY IS A GIFT,
WHICH IS WHY
WE CALL IT
THE PRESENT.
